

I am just about to head out to present my Eat Your Poem pop-up poetry booth at a THREE-DAY festival on Miami Beach. Art Deco Weekend draws thousands of folks so wish me luck as I spread the poetic love!

In preparation for this festival, I purchased another vintage typewriter to add to the arsenal. This one feels reeeeeeeaaally great ---- like it's got lots of stories to tell. As soon as I took it out of its case, this impromptu poem popped out! It felt like I was welcoming the typewriter and he (I think this one is male) was welcoming me. :-D I offer it to you as POEM FOURTEEN! (I've also included some photos of this lovely typewriter and a photo of the original typed poem as well)

POEM FOURTEEN

Welcome this manual
Magical machine
It's nice to feel you
Welcome to the team

Wonder what we'll channel
Together
You and I
On your keys
I'll hammer heavy
Other times I'll try

To be light

All I can promise
To be used by the muses

You and I got this
Let flow the juices!

Let's make waves
Let's misspell
Misbehave

Let's shake
People up

Make them forget
What they heard

Ready???

Let's spread the good word
